Editor General Minutes.

James Newbury FitzGerald, D.D., LL.D.

Bishop FitzGerald was the thirty-ninth among the sixty-four incumbents of the Episcopal office in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Eight of the thirty-eight whose election antedated his survived him, namely, Bishops Bowman, Andrews, Warren, Foss, Walden, Mallalieu, Fowler, and Vincent.

Bishop FitzGerald was born July 27, 1837, at Newark, N. J., and died at Hongkong, April 4, 1907, while on a tour of Episcopal visitation in Southern Asia. His age was, therefore, sixty-nine years, eight months, and eight days. He chose as his profession the practice of law and was admitted to the bar, but in 1861 he determined to enter the ministry, and in the following year united with the Newark Conference. He served in the pastoral relation until 1878, and as Presiding Elder from 1878 to 1880; in the latter year he was elected a member of the General Conference, and again in 1884. In 1881 he was elected Recording Secretary of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and by virtue thereof became a legal member of the General Missionary Committee. This office he held until his elevation to the Episcopacy by the General Conference of 1888. In the General Conference of that year, for the first time, two thirds of all the votes cast were necessary to effect an election to the Episcopacy. John H. Vincent was elected on the third ballot by 311 votes, 306 being necessary to a choice. On the same ballot Dr. FitzGerald was elected, receiving 310 votes. His election was followed by the election of Bishops Joyce, Newman, and Goodsell; the first two preceded him to the "better country."

The following tribute to Bishop FitzGerald's character is taken from Dr. J. M. Buckley's editorial, entitled, "Sad News from a Far Country," in the Christian Advocate of April 11, 1907:

As a bishop he was a remarkable presiding officer. Neither in the General Conference nor in any Annual Conference did he ever for a moment lose his self-control. He was a master of parliamentary law. For every decision he had a reason—in the nature of the motion, or in the letter of the law, or in the precedents. He was strong in his prejudices and prepossessions; and as there are cases where the actual issue can, with a very considerable show of reason, be decided in either of two ways, as a single hair added to a ton's weight on either side of a scale might determine the balance, so with him the personal equation might determine a parliamentary decision, and that without his consciousness of the fact. Two of the bishops who have passed away since the last General Conference could be spoken of as having legal minds. The first, Bishop Merrill, was of a speculative turn, not caring much for precedents, thinking aloud and frequently ending in a way which from his beginning would not have been expected, and on some occasions reversing himself. Bishop FitzGerald, at the other extreme, held fast to the letter, and sought to discover undetected possibilities in the words, paid much attention to precedents, and rarely, if ever, changed his opinion after it was once formed. The Commission on the Consolidation of the Benevolences contains several lawyers selected for their eminence in their profession, as well as several other members versed in the law of the Methodist Episcopal Church. We do not hesitate to say that no more useful member of that Commission than he could be found by the most careful analysis of each one.

Bishop FitzGerald belonged to a class of men who need opposition or a crisis to bring their latent powers of speech into action. His reticence frequently enveloped in mystery his opinions and intentions. His power of silence was remarkable, at times suggesting the remark concerning Von Moltke, that he was silent in seven languages, but when he broke silence it was demonstrated that he had done much thinking.

In all the spheres of his active life Bishop FitzGerald exerted much suggestive influence in personal conversation. He adhered with untiring tenacity to his friends; those who served or obliged him he was willing to serve or oblige to the full limit of his conscience, yet if deceived by anyone he considered all obligations of more than ordinary Christian courtesy and helpfulness to be relinquished. In his pastoral relations, which are the real test of the minister's heart, he was very tender. A more sympathetic man never lived, though many less sympathetic have the outward signs which belong to a larger inward experience than time and test reveal. Such also were his domestic relations. To his mother he was devoted, and to his wife and children he was a typical husband and father.

Most mysterious were the afflictions which his faith was destined to bear. His son lost his eyesight, and all that knew Bishop FitzGerald know how tenderly he felt the affliction, as much for himself as for his wife and her boy. It is mysterious that the daughter upon whom the family relied in sickness and in health, at home and abroad, should be doomed to die in a foreign land under extremely painful circumstances.

Bishop FitzGerald had been almost an invalid since he left America, and by the death of his daughter he was profoundly depressed, and even before she died his traveling companions feared that her sickness would prove more than he could endure.

The Bishop's remains were brought from Hongkong, and reached Newark, N. J., on May 11, 1907. Public obsequies were held in Central Methodist Episcopal Church on Friday, May 17, five bishops and many distinguished ministers and laymen being present.

A special train on the Pennsylvania Railroad bore the funeral party to the cemetery at Linden, where the body, after its long journeying, was tenderly laid in the family plot. Bishop Wilson read the ritual at the grave.
